

Source: Journal of Negro Education
www.journalnegroed.org

The Journal of Negro Education is published by the Howard University School of Education with assistance from a national editorial and advisory board. From the website: “The Journal encompasses the area of professional education as well as social sciences, physical and natural sciences, the arts, and technology concerned with the successes, virtues, and problems of education of Black people in the U.S. and throughout the world. Moreover, The Journal serves as a vehicle for publishing significant research on the progress of Black education.”